Elsy Studios Designs Hires New Senior Project Manager

Mark Cheeks Joins Denver Design Studio

DENVER (November 20, 2014) Denver-based commercial interior design firm Elsy Studios (www.elsystudios.com) recently added Mark Cheeks, senior project manager, to its team of interior design professionals.

Mark will be responsible for managing many of Elsy's commercial interior design projects, and supervising managers and interior designers. He will also assist with construction administration processes and adopt an internal operations role.

Mark has more than 20 years of professional experience in the interior design and architecture industry, including studio manager at Ware Malcomb, principal of Mark Cheeks Interiors and work for Rocky Mountain Prestress. His background includes creative design solutions, project and staff management, marketing and business development, and financial operations.

"Mark has done it all, which makes him a perfect fit for a project management role because he understands every element that goes into a successful project," said Lynn Coit, president of Elsy Studios. "Mark will be instrumental in helping Elsy continue to create unique spaces that promote stronger, better work environments."
